Dear Burt:

Forgive me for writing you so late.

There were two exhibitions in a row, and following that we kept on working without a wink, and now takes place our July lectures.

I have not forgotten our dates and commitments. There are a few hurdles that I have to pass in the next two months to make your exhibition possible. I am sure you have not heard about it but Turkey is going through a radical financial crisis and the banks are the most under burden. Just two weeks ago, Turkey's 4th biggest bank defaulted. Today the stock exchange dropped again and the USD to Turkish Lira ratio is getting worse each day. Since I am working with a bank - the institution we run is directly supported by one - I particularly feel the tension. How this will effect the exhibition is yet to be seen. Tomorrow, I send you a floor plan (again) with my offers. I hope you will accept the layout. Please bear with me, all was going fine until last month. The situation is not so rosy here. I hope you are enjoying the summer.

Best,

Vasif
